

Hyland Crest hit by labour unrest

Workers protest scheduling changes

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

Hyland Crest's health care aid workers took to the streets over the weekend to protest a decision by the facility's board of management to terminate six jobs and reduce the part-time hours of 17 others.

The workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees' local 1225, picketed around the streets of Minden in the rain on Friday afternoon and again on Saturday to raise awareness of their concerns over job security and collect signatures on a petition that will be submitted to the county.

"We're protesting the lack of communication that we've had with management," local president Sharon Crowe told The Echo. "This change just doesn't seem fair—why eliminate jobs and then bring in new people?"

She stressed that the care of the residents will not be affected by the protest. The workers had also planned to picket around Minden again this afternoon (Tuesday).

The board of management, comprised of Hyland Crest administration and five county council members, decided to change the facility's personnel by hiring five registered nursing assistants, terminating six health care aids and reducing the part-time hours of 17 aids from about 25 hours a week to an average of 13.5. The changes are scheduled to take effect on June 15.

Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Bern Berry, chairman of the board of management committee, told The Echo that because of the current economic conditions and new initiatives coming down from the Ontario Ministry of Health, the committee felt that the decision to change the scheduling system was the best.

"We've proposed to hire registered nurses aids that have their medication certification and they will be better able to care for

by NANCY KUZMICH

Is Haliburton's Home and Vacation Show the same every year? If so, could it use a fresh look?

Here are some opinions of those in the know: the exhibitors.

Bob Patton, owner of North Shore Lawn & Garden, Minden. This was Mr. Patton's third Haliburton Home Show. "My wife Eleanor and I thought there was more variety in the booths this time. It is the same basic thing every year. People were telling me it was one of the better shows in the area and that there was no comparison to the Bobcaygeon show."

"Friday night was very busy and I understand Saturday was very busy. I didn't sell anything at the show but a lot of people came and bought at the store afterwards."

Laurie Devolin, owner of Designs by Devolin, Mrs. Devolin found some slight changes in her fourth year exhibiting at the show. "Every year they do a little bit more. It looks a little bit more professional. It's getting to be a really good home show, a really professional show."

Devolin says it's hard to see a big difference every year since it's a local show and it's mostly local people putting booths in.

"It's a small town and most local people are going to come out to see it anyway. You might see newer things like the marinas might have newer models. But even in a recession, you still have to go in it to let people know you're still here. There's not as much feedback but people coming up from the city don't know

Sewell visits Muskoka for rural areas' input

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

Rural areas are being short-changed in the current process of reforming Ontario's planning and development laws, the Sewell Commission was told at a public forum Saturday in Gravenhurst.

"Rural areas really aren't recognized in your work so far," planning consultant Ross Raymond told the Commission on Planning and Development Reform in Ontario. "You say people shouldn't be encouraged to live in rural areas and that development should be intensified but what we need to do is to keep urban influence out of rural areas. As it now stands, rural areas appear short-changed."

Other topics presented at the forum included responsibility for and the use of septic systems, public access to waterways and development capacities around lakes. The Commission is holding forums to solicit public com-just concentrate on 'urban' and 'rural' lands.

ment on its proceedings across the province throughout the year. It is scheduled to submit an interim report to the Ministry of Municipal Affairs next month, a final draft for public consultation by the end of the year and a final report by July 1, 1993.

Virtually all of the presentations made to Commission Chairman John Sewell and Commissioners Toby Vigod and George Penfold on Saturday dealt in some way with the need to find a better definition of what is considered 'rural' and with fine-tuning the proposed reform goals to more accurately meet the needs of non-urban areas throughout the province.

"A definition of what a 'rural' area is important," said Muskoka Lakes Township representative Stephen Fahner. "To promote community well-being as well as economic vitality, small communities should be given the clear opportunity to develop a particular character of development."

Haliburton County is considered in the Commission's work so far as "Lake, Riverine and Cottage County," but Minden resident Bernie Davis told the Commission that the County is much more complex than just cottage country.

"The current working group for our area doesn't reflect the true character of Haliburton," she said. "We only have planners in the working group and we need to have regular people who may have other concerns."

Another delegation suggested that the commission add 'lakeshore' to their list and not of water supplies. "My main purpose was to view and monitor the wells. It took us three days to visit all of them," said Lal.

Lal said he operated each well by hand. Most were working, but there were problems with broken chains, platforms and iron in the water.

"We contacted the magistrate of the area and we had a chat. He promised to look after the wells as soon as possible."

The Ruche project also conducts seminars to educate the villagers about how to take care of the wells, on ways to generate income and on literacy.

"The villagers are more educated, but there is still room for further education."

The Ruche project confirmed Lal's belief that the need for efforts like HAVE are absolutely necessary.

"The people are very thankful for the help and we have started seeing some results."

While Lal was fortunate to see the direct result of his efforts, most of the participants on Saturday's walk have not had the same opportunity. But it didn't make them any less committed to the cause.

Marilyn Mighton of Maple Lake walked the route while her five-year-old son Arlen biked along in front of her.

"We really do talk about the people who are living in less luxury than we are. Here, water is taken for granted. By doing this, we are taking part in a world community and we can connect with others. I want to pass this on to Arlen," said Mighton who has participated in the walk for the last four years.

Patrick, 4, munched on a sandwich as his mother explained that they raised $300 for what they considered a "nice family outing."

"We'll try again next year and maybe we'll get a further," she said.

The last of the walkers arrived at the band shell just after 1 p.m. They were greeted with hot dogs, drinks and the rocking sounds of band performing "Pretty Woman." Exhausted participants stretched out and relaxed on the grass. And the healing power of water took on new importance as they soothed their aching feet in a wading pool.

Last year's Walk Marshal, Norm Wallace, was back for his ninth Walk For Water. Wallace, 80, collected $1,147 in pledges from 97 people. He said he walks every year because of the importance of the effort. And he intends to keep on walking.

"I think I'll get in a few more good years yet," he said as he took a break at one of the check points.

This was the first walk for Stefan Bjelis, his wife and two children, and they raised $120. As they quenched their thirst with oranges and ice-cubes, Bjelis explained why they decided to participate.

"We're doing it for two reasons. One reason is for the exercise and the other is for supporting clean water."

Further on into the walk, at the seven kilometre mark, Amy Rosenberg, 12, Erin Turner, 11, Freya Lilius, 12 and Ainsley Heyes, 12, were still full of energy.

"I've walked every year since it started," said Freya. "When I was little my mom used to pull me in a stroller."

While most people went on to finish all 16 kilometres of the walk, some weary walkers opted to take a boat back to town at the nine kilometre mark.

Nancy and Jon Louch and their son Patrick waited patiently in the boat for their return trip to Haliburton.

Patrick, 4, munched on a sandwich as his mother explained that they raised $300 for what they considered a "nice family outing."

"We'll try again next year and maybe we'll get a further," she said.

On June 1 it was reported to Apsley OPP that there was a person in need of medical assistance. While on patrol an officer was flagged down on Highway 28 in Cardiff Township. The driver advised that he was having severe back and chest pains and needed to get to a hospital. The driver was transported to Hospital in Bancroft by Police.

Splish splash, two ducks take a bath

by JANET HURLEY

Staff Reporter

Have you noticed how bold the ducks who inhabit the area around Head Lake Park have become?

They can be seen popping their heads into the Community Police Office or waddling nonchalantly across Maple Avenue.

But an episode in Emmerson Plumbing last week was the height of audacity.

On Monday morning, two customers walked into the store and following right behind them were two male mallards. The ducks checked out the merchandise as store clerk Bob Gilligan asked them to leave. He used a pleading, but polite approach.

"From behind the desk I said, 'Get out of here. C'mon.'"

But the ducks refused to listen. Instead they headed straight to a Jacuzzi and jumped into the tub.

Gilligan, not wanting to be rude to his new feathered customers, tried to reason with them.

"I tried to shoos them out of the tub. But there was no way they were going to move."

Then things turned ugly when Gilligan decided to get tough. He tried to grab the ducks, but they started flying around causing a minor panic. Finally, he got a firm grip on the rabble-rousers and escorted them out the door.

"We haven't seen them since."

Gilligan said he is unable to offer an explanation of why the mallards opted to take a rub-a-dub-dub in the tub. If the water had been warm and bubbly, he could understand why they would take the plunge. But the Jacuzzi was turned off and the water was room-temperature.

"I wouldn't even get in it. It's full of Javex."

Suspicious man reported

On June 1 it was reported to Apsley OPP that there was a person in need of medical assistance. While on patrol an officer was flagged down on Highway 28 in Cardiff Township. The driver advised that he was having severe back and chest pains and needed to get to a hospital. The driver was transported to Hospital in Bancroft by Police.

On June 2 a complaint was received by Apsley OPP of a vehicle traveling at an excessive rate of speed on Highway 121. Police have increased the radar patrol on this highway and the surrounding area.

Also on June 2 a report was received of a male person who was acting suspiciously in the Cardiff Township area. The person is described as a male Caucasian mid to late 20's with long dark curly hair, a dark beard and mustache. The party was wearing bluish colour jacket and work boots. The person was described as dirty looking. Patrols were made but the person was not observed. Anyone who

Parking and security could stand improvement at future home shows

this type of service is offered."

She adds that hopefully people will keep in mind what they see offered at the Home Show when they're in need of those services.

Richard Hope, Hope Satellite & T.V. Mr. Hope figures he's had a booth at the show for 10 or 11 years. "It's definitely improved lately with the lady looking after it (Dorothy Clements). She seems to be doing a good job...she's well organized, efficient and doesn't raise too many hackles. She's also very diplomatic and capable of looking after complaints and there's lots of us doing lots of complaining."

As for whether any changes are needed, Hope has his own philosophy.

"If it's broken, you fix it. If it's not, leave it."

He attended the Bobcaygeon show and felt it wasn't as well organized as the Haliburton event. But he feels there's room for improvement when it comes to parking facilities and security. He was worried about people hanging around the exhibits before and after the show and interfering with displays.

But, all things considered, he'll be back.

"It always means business by being there."

Heather Coneybeare, secretary/bookkeeper at Coneybeare Motors. In their fifth year attending, the Coneybeares were impressed with the blue drop-sheets supplied to every booth. "The whole concept was very professional. The weather was in our favour and more local people went through than tourists. There seemed to be a lot of really good exhibits — some new ones and some old ones."

Coneybeare likes the timing of the show since many exhibitors would be too busy during the summer to attend.

"For a lot of single proprietors, they're running their business right out of the home show."

Aileen Moore, owner of Newbatt's Furniture & Appliances. "We've been there ever since there was a home show and it's great as far as we're concerned. Dorothy checked with us and the only thing my husband Doug suggested was a little bit of country music in the arena where it's going to draw the people to listen and they're going to take in the Home Show too. Something like that would be much better than fashion shows."

Moore also felt the professional look of things really paid off this year.

"As far as we were concerned, it's the best Home Show we ever had."

Brenda Bain, owner of Durable Wall Systems. This was Roger and Brenda Bain's first year having their own booth. "The response was good. We're specialized so you'd have to come looking for a foundation or sidewalk. If you're planning on building you'd come looking for that kind of thing — what's available or what people are in that business. Roger made several contacts and even if he gets one job...several months down the road someone might turn around and say 'I've got his business card'. The show was excellent and we definitely plan to go in again."

Jim O'Connor, owner of Highland Glass. O'Connor has been in business for 10 years and during that time has exhibited at every Home Show. "It went fairly smooth, it was set up well. It's reassuring that people are still there — we're still here. Saturday was the main day. The tourists weren't up enough — because of the economy they're not travelling as soon in the year."

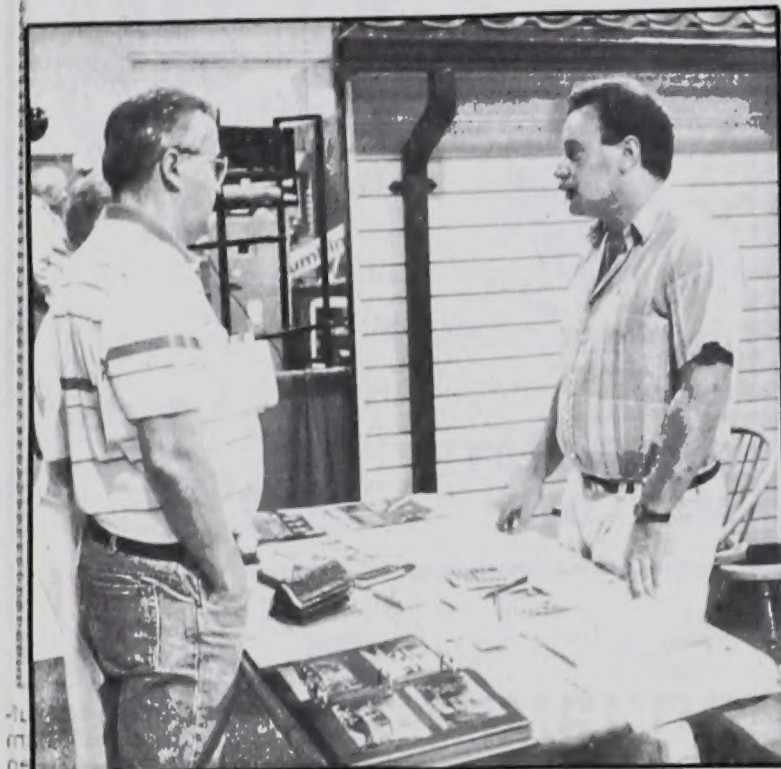

With regards to the never-changing agenda at the home show, O'Connor doesn't see what can be done about it.

"There's not a drastic amount of change since it's the same thing every year. I don't know what other drawing card they can offer."

Home and Vacation Show coordinator Dorothy Clements was not available for comment at press time.

IMPRESSIVE DISPLAYS: K Enterprises' of Haliburton brought their windows and appliances to the Home Show over the weekend, joining a broad range of other exhibitors at the 14th annual event.

SHOW TALK: Rod Thurston of Rodco Enterprises, right, talks with a Home Show visitor on Saturday. Dozens of local businesses participated in the show, which was busy throughout the weekend.

On June 5 a report was received through Bancroft OPP of a theft on Paudash Lake. A two seat blue and white paddle boat was stolen from an island on Paudash grow over naturally in order to save the lake. Shoreline reforestation reduces erosion and the visible impact of development. Irwin hopes other private land owners will follow suit and let nature take its course.

CARING FOR THEIR FUTURE: Heather Irwin, 3, and her brother Thomas, 5, water one of the seedlings their father planted along the shoreline of his property on Lake Kashagawigamog. Mike Irwin is letting his land

Environmental project hooks Gr. 8 students

by JANET HURLEY

Staff Reporter

Something fishy is going on in the streets of Minden.

At the mouth of every storm drain in the downtown area, a large yellow fish has appeared.

But this is not some freak of nature — the fish are in fact stencilled images and they were deliberately painted on the streets by students at Archie Stouffer Public School to get a message across.

"We're painting beside the storm drains because everybody puts toxic chemicals down them," said Grade 8 student Janene Garbutt. "The storm drains eventually lead to a creek and the fish live there...and they eventually die."

The Grade 8 students of Penny Obee's class, dressed in fluorescent orange vests and carrying pylons and paint, descended on the downtown streets last Tuesday as part of an effort to educate the public about the dangers to our environment. They hope to inform everyone that the oils, soaps and pesticides being washed down the drains do not go through filters or sewage plants, but go straight into the lakes and kill the fish.

The project, which has already proved successful in British Columbia, was instigated by Obee after she received a video and information kit from the Department of Fisheries. But she said the students are to be commended for their initiative.

"It's a project they did entirely — Please turn to page 10"

A FISH THAT WON'T GET AWAY: Grade 8 students from Archie Stouffer Elementary School — Janene Garbutt, Geoff Oitment, Nicole Graham and Chantel Bryan — pose behind the yellow fish painted beside a Minden storm drain. Reforestation protects lakes

by JANET HURLEY

Staff Reporter

A Lake Kashagawigamog cottage owner is hoping others will follow his example.

Mike Irwin is letting his lawn grow over as naturally as possible and he has planted seedlings along the shoreline of his property in an effort to save the lake. As the environment representative of the Lake Kashagawigamog Organization, he plans to let others know about the benefits of doing the same.

"My philosophy is that private land owners have a lot of say in the quality of lake water and what they do in their front and back yards."

He calls this shoreline reforestation project "Maple 10" which means leaving 10 feet of land along the edge of the lake untouched and growing naturally.

Irwin has let his own lawn grow on its own for years and this spring, he planted 15 new trees.

Shoreline reforestation has a number of benefits. The trees provide a natural buffer and help to absorb nutrients. They also help reduce the effects of erosion along the shore. The shade from the trees is important for fish spawning as it helps to keep fluctuation and temperature down. And perhaps the most immediate benefit is that the trees help to reduce the visual impact of development on the lake.

"If this is the country then we should let it look like the country."

Irwin said Lake Kashagawigamog is highly overdeveloped and with all the clear cutting going on, the lake water is suffering.

"There is a direct impact with the cutting in this area and the quality of water."

Since the mid-70s, the quality of the lake water has been tested through a private effort called the Self Help program. Irwin is part of the program and he said the tests have shown that because of development, the lake has aged rapidly.

Irwin borrowed the idea of "Maple 10" from a magazine three years ago and as environment representative, he passed the idea on to the 200 members of the Lake Kashagawigamog Organization. Irwin then contacted the Ministry of Natural Resources and they supplied coniferous trees from the Orono nurseries at no cost. This year, about 12 property owners decided to take action and 500 trees were planted.

"I don't expect everyone to live like hermits. It doesn't cost anything to let the shoreline grow naturally. In fact it's probably easier and less work to let it go."

Irwin hopes this shoreline reforestation effort will become an annual project and he wants individual property owners to take the initiative to call the MNR and request seedlings.

"We talk about saving the rain-forest in Brazil, but the same people are not practising what they preach at home."

The greening of the Highlands

From the top of the CN Tower, Toronto seems like a city of forests. For a city of thousands of buildings, there's an amazing number of green leaves camouflaging the bricks and cement. It creates a pretty effect, humanizing a world which is dedicated to efficiency and progress. In cities, trees provide a bit of psychological breathing space between residents and their hectic, sometimes hostile, way of life.

When you drive to the top of Skyline Park in Haliburton, what's amazing is the lack of trees in the village itself. The small-town image of quaint tree-lined streets has to be found elsewhere. What you see is the tops of roofs, which weren't designed for their scenic quality. For a village surrounded by forests, people seem to take for granted the importance of trees to our wellbeing. Which is why the province's proposed tree-cutting regulations are to be welcomed.

In Haliburton, trees have led a double life. To residents, they represent an opportunity for prosperity. When the first settlers found the land inhospitable to growing crops, they turned to the "crop" which was already at home here. Men who worked the fields in the summer worked the forests in the winter, sending their harvests down the rivers and lakes for the people in the cities to turn into chairs, boats, paper, what-have-you. Even today, cutting wood for woodstoves is a welcome way to supplement many people's income.

To seasonal residents and visitors, trees represent the lost horizon, a way to renew their links to the land. All those trees in Toronto still can't hide the eye-level truths of crowded streets and towering buildings. Urban dwellers come to Haliburton to feel protected from the modern world, to find the tranquillity which only comes from being surrounded by nature. The wind rustling the leaves is indeed magic to their ears.

Although both groups recognize the importance of trees, individuals in both groups have often been blind to their significance. A developer cuts down every tree on the lot, builds a cottage, plants a few saplings in the exposed earth, and then wonders why the shoreline is slipping into the lake. (An energy-eating air conditioner is also installed to do what the trees' shade used to do for free.) People walk down the main street of Haliburton and can find no cool and protected place to sit — even with all this concern about ozone layer depletion and skin cancer. The village becomes a place to drive past, not meander through on foot. Except for the Ministry of Natural Resources' efforts, few agencies or governments are mandated to think about the future survival of our forests.

It's true the proposed changes will add more restrictions to what people can do with their property. But restrictions aren't new. It used to be that cottages could be built next to the shore. Now everyone recognizes the environmental impact of such disastrous planning. Besides, it's nice to take a boat ride and still see the shoreline — not a row of cottages. We're told how fast we can drive on the way to the lake, how many life-jackets we should have, how close our cottage should be to our neighbours — all for "our own good." Too bad that sounds so paternalistic.

If regulations are in place, then people know the rules from the beginning. They know that private property does not mean private exploitation of our resources. They cannot object when a site plan includes how many trees must remain standing, not just how many must be planted. They know their neighbours can protect the rows of trees which provide a buffer between properties, no matter which property they grow on.

Why object to rules which are designed to protect one of Haliburton's strongest assets, the thing that attracts people to our shores, and ensures they continue to arrive for years yet to come?

FMVA proposals are unfair

TO THE EDITOR FROM OUR READERS

To the Editor:

Re: the May 26th Echo.

Yet another editorial on the 'fairness' of FMVA! You propose that everyone should ask themselves, "Is the proposed system more fair than the present one?"

The proposed system not only perpetuates a basis 'unfairness' but makes it even more unfair. The cottagers whose assessments are already higher than the average, and who everybody seems to be accepting are the backbone of the Highlands economy, are 'prohibited' from enjoying the most expensive service their municipality provides and one to which Seventy percent of the tax bill is directed — Education.

It was the provincial government that created the unfairness and it is the provincial government that should be urged to correct it.

Instead of preaching on the fairness of FMVA, your editorials (and the editorials of every newspaper in Ontario) should be directed towards correcting this basic wrong.

Reeve supports changes

AN OPEN LETTER TO — Haliburton County Council Members:

Mr. Bern Berry, a member of the County Council and Chairman of the board for Hyland Crest, in an article in the Haliburton County Echo, said "We are dealing with personnel. We felt it should be addressed by the board of management first." Mr. Berry once again asked that the committee be allowed to deal with the issue first. This was in response to a representation of the Ontario

Nurses Association (ONA) and Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE).

Mr. Berry dealt with the personnel and the issue in a letter to the staff of the Home. Mr. Berry said the committee has made the decision to support the Director of Nursing and the Administrator in their proposal to implement a new scheduling strategy.

This is what Mr. Berry supported: The changes involve very drastic repercussions to a number of the employees. There are at present nine full time and 23 part time members of the nursing staff. Six part time jobs were terminated; all the other part time employees are to have their hours cut to 13.5 hours per week from an average of 25 hours.

These changes will bring a great deal of hardship to all those involved. There was no discussion with the employees or their representatives, no warning, just the dictatorial, Victorian management decision. This is to upgrade the Home by employing five full time R.N.A.s — full employment for five to upgrade service at the home while 23 part time employees are downgraded to half wages or no wages at all. This form elected officials. With decisions like that rest assured the employees of Hyland Crest and their friends will be very active at the next municipal election.

Other facts that should be brought to your attention:

In 1989, grievances by members were almost unknown.

1990 the grievances numbered fewer than six.

1991 grievances by C.U.P.E. were eighteen.

1992 grievances at this date are twelve.

We are unable to provide the number of grievances by O.N.A. (Ontario Nurses Association).

Grievances are costly to both the Union and the Home, not only in monetary terms, but also in their effects on care. Care is a prime concern of the members of C.U.P.E. and O.N.A. towards the residents of the Home.

There was an instance that was documented in excess of 40 times, all ignored by management to the point that an outside agency was called in to the home by two employees.

CREIGHTON FEIR

WE ARE LESS THAN two months away from the Rotary Club of Haliburton's annual Summer Carnival. We understand that the club will make a major change this year and move the midway and all the other games to Head Lake Park. This would appear to be a very good move.

It's not too early for all runners to start making plans for the Haliburton Mile '92 which will take place on Wednesday, August 7, at 7:00 p.m. sharp. This will be followed by the Rotary Parade in the village of Haliburton. If you enjoy a carnival atmosphere and run best with thousands of rowdy spectators urging you on, then Rotary Mile '92 is a must event for you. Just think — more than $1,400. in cash and merchandise.

The Minden Agricultural Society, sponsor of the Haliburton County Fair, is once again conducting a zucchini growing contest for the children in Grades 1-3 (inclusive) in Haliburton County. The untreated seeds will be distributed to the children throughout the schools and it is to be hoped that the parents will encourage the children to plant the seeds and keep their plants watered and weeded.

Each and every spring the men and women who give freely of their time as members of the Haliburton Horticultural Society put in a great effort placing beautiful flowers in the planters that you see displayed all around town. These flowers, plants and trees add a great deal of colour to the community and especially to the downtown core. One day last week I was on the main street (Highland Street that is) when I stopped to talk with Dorothy Baker, who is a very hard worker for the society. She told me that she hopes no one would bother to pull the flowers out of the planters this year. As I walked on up the street I met Phyllis Woodcock working very hard with the flowers in the planter boxes. Hats off to these two ladies and everyone else who work so very hard to beautify the village.

If you are from out of town and have been wondering what the weather is like here in the Highlands of Haliburton, let me tell you that we have had some badly needed rain, but other than that the weather has been the next thing to perfect. Most days we have had sunny skies, warm days and cool for sleeping in the evenings. We have had a few days that the weather conditions have been ideal. I don't think that I have ever seen the countryside look any nicer than it does at the present time. The rain that fell in the spring has turned everything nice and green.

We are urging all motorists to be on the lookout for ducks crossing the highway in the village of Haliburton. At various times of the day the ducks can be seen making their way across the highway, near the white bridge by the Drag Lake Municipal building. You will also notice them crossing the highway from the town dock to Rachel's Bakery. You can also spot them crossing the highway near the Shamrock Service Centre and the Silver Maple Motel. One needs to be a little patient as you see them walking along at a very slow pace. Please look out for the ducks.

While still on the subject of ducks, Lois Emmerson was telling me the other night about a funny incident that took place one day last week at Emmerson Plumbing on Maple Avenue in Haliburton. Apparently when no one was looking two ducks wandered in the front entrance of the store, made their way up into the Jacuzzi which was filled with water, and had a wonderful time splashing water all over the floor. The manager of the store had a great time trying to get the ducks out of the Jacuzzi. They were having such a good time they decided to stay.

We wish to send along our congratulations to Cam Monk of Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home who was elected president of the Bay of Quinte Funeral Service at its annual meeting on May 27th.

A few local notes . . . We are sorry to report that Don Robinson took ill one day last week and is now in hospital . . . Tim and Janice Chambers returned home last week following a trip by motorcycle to the United States . . . Word reached us last week that Bob Short of Haliburton suffered a heart attack recently and is now a patient in a Belleville hospital . . . A speedy recovery to Betty Hodgson who we are sorry to report has been on the sick list . . . Just received word from Gail Webster that Norland Public School will be closing and that a re-union has been scheduled for Sat. June 20th . . . Please note the Salad Supper at Orange Hall, George Street, Haliburton which was advertised to be held on June 19th, should have read June 17th.

The bugs and bites of summer

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

IT WAS A HOT TOPIC of conversation at the grocery store. People were clustered in small groups by the grapefruit and pork chops, discussing this year's plague. The most-heard complaint was lack of sleep as everyone's night had been turned into a battle with a noisy yet invisible enemy. With darkly circled eyes and irritable dispositions, people rose from their beds in the morning, frustrated and besieged. Whether indoors or out, there was no escape. People would run to their vehicles and quickly jump in, making sure the windows were rolled up. Thus hermetically sealed within their cars, trucks and vans, they headed for town. It was only in town, away from the bush and water, that they had a hope of escaping for awhile, the constant onslaught. It was that time of year again in Haliburton county.

Sylvia was a great booster of her home area. The last thing she wanted to do was spread alarming tales of hordes of insects descending upon hapless cottagers and taking them away, never to be seen again. However, if asked, she would be truthful in response to the question, "How are the bugs?" She could not pretend that for the last five days she had not kept every window in the house closed, convinced as she was that somehow tiny mosquitoes managed to squirm through the screen mesh with the sole purpose of making her life miserable. Nor could she pretend that she hadn't noticed some of the town's most prominent citizens scratching up against a corner in the drugstore or rubbing their backs on a lamppost on main street.

The general consensus was that this year was particularly bad for bugs, especially mosquitoes. Their bothersome presence would wane after the initial onslaught, diminishing from a flurry of biting frenzy to the odd, mildly irritating nibble. But while the frenzy was at its height, life could be miserable. For some reason, be it weather or sun spots or the recession, the mosquitoes were more determined, more all-pervasive than Sylvia could ever remember.

As a result of the siege, her day had settled into a routine that, while short-lived, was a necessary method of survival. Rising for an early morning walk with the dog, having endured a fitful sleep punctuated by many a whining bug bite, she donned clothing that covered her neck to finger tips. A hat and mosquito net, snugly tucked in at the neckline, protected her skin as she gazed out at a world that had a mottled, green tinge. The dog was sprayed, much to his disgust, with Dr. Spot's Animal Insect Repellent. The bugs would then circle and float above both of them, unable to penetrate this wall of protection.

They would then set out, walking briskly down the bush-lined road, for their dose of fresh air, exercise and 30 minutes of thumbing their noses at the bugs. Along the way, Sylvia often passed neighbours similarly netted, who were out working in their gardens. The reasoning was that at 6:30 a.m. the temperature was still low enough to discourage much mosquito activity. Therefore there was a flurry of outdoor work that would cease by 8:00.

The dog was not pleased with these walks. He did not like the strange smelling spray with its hissing application nor did he like the cloud of bugs that rose from last year's leaves every time he strolled over to a tree trunk, looking for interesting smells. Oh for the clean crisp days of winter.

Learning from summer jobs

A COUPLE OF WEEKS ago, while discussing the job situation around the county, the editor and I got talking about the summer jobs people used to do while they were in high school.

With local unemployment running into the 30 per cent area, and our current government's minimum wage rules, it is as logical for an employer to hire an adult as a student for almost any job. Aside from the money, the unfortunate students are bound to miss out on some of the learning kind of experiences we used to get.

A couple of weeks ago, the announcement of the fall closing of the Kuntz/Carling-now-Labatt's brewery in Waterloo led me to write about my summer on the bottling line there.

That particular job was actually taken after I left school and had worked full-time at the newspaper. I decided I wanted to move on to somewhere else where the skills I had learned there would make me enough money to live on my own.

I took the brewery job, where you could make big money — $1.30 an hour, a shift bonus for nights and double time if you worked a holiday, (and I did) — big bucks! I used it to finance by search for an advertising agency job, and took one in Toronto that fall...

The real summer jobs were during your high school days. When you were younger, the sort of things you did were cut lawns, shine shoes, deliver newspapers or for a drug or grocery store. At least, that was the kind of work that I could find.

When I got to high school, I was expected to work after four and Saturday all year, and try to find an all-day job in the summer. (My mother was a single-parent and, while wages were low, what I made could actually make a difference).

I had moved from London to Kitchener by this time, and it took some time to learn what jobs there were. The first one, sweeping up in a printing plant may have led to my interest in learning that trade, and gave me a lot of training in bindery operations that came in handy later in life...

I then got a job working after school and Saturdays at the Waterloo Spring Company, a very diverse operation that became my year 'round training ground for a couple of years.

Everyone started out hauling sawdust from the woodworking building, where they made playpens and the frames for furniture, to the main plant where it was burned. To be honest, about all I learned from this was that it got really cold in the winter, and that I had trouble in getting to Solla Salaw. Of the banks of the beautiful river Wahoo. Where they never have troubles, at least very few.

PINE POINT, KENNISIS LAKE: Sometimes, life imitates Dr. Seuss. Take last Saturday for example, when Jodie Riplins married her high school sweetheart on a swimming raft, fifteen metres from shore.

"Todd and I are both cancers," she said, by means of explanation. "That's a water sign, hence the raft."

I narrowed my eyes and asked if she was talking about the zodiac.

"Clever boy," she said, buoyantly.

"I don't believe in that stuff."

"Neither do I, not really."

I looked up and down at Jodie and smiled. She looked nothing like the precocious tomboy I met in swimming class in the early seventies. Back then she had tree-trunk legs and scuffed-up elbows. Now she had frilly lace and white high heels. Back then she was into toad racing, gummi bears, and John Denver. Now she's into the pro-choice movement, network marketing, and motorcycles.

Yes, motorcycles.

"I was afraid you were going to get married on that motorcycle of yours," her mother told her, minutes before the wedding.

"No way," said Jodie. "A raft is much more becoming."

"Besides, minister's don't wear leather," Todd pointed out.

I asked them why they chose Kennisis, as opposed to any other body of water.

"We considered getting married on the H.M.S. Segwun, but Kennisis is where the heart is," said Jodie. "It's like Solla Salaw up here."

Solla Sawhat?

"Solla Salaw," she repeated, "from the Dr. Seuss book."

I must have looked confused, for she quickly elaborated.

"Solla Salaw is a magical land where they never have troubles, at least very few. Oh sure, we have carpenter ants and expensive hydro, but those are minor troubles, and mostly it's paradise up here. Isn't it, lover?"

She ruffled Todd's hair and he smiled back affectionately. Jodie's Mother beamed, and her father stared outside at the milling guests.

"It's showtime," he remarked.

Ten minutes later, Jodie and Todd were balancing on the raft. Next to their feet, in an aluminum canoe, knelt the best man and the matron of honour. The minister, who had wanted to wear a life-jacket but was persuaded otherwise, read from the book of common prayer. The air was hot and still. The friends and relatives stood on shore, swatting blackflies.

After the vows were exchanged, Jodie's brother played "The Wedding Song" on his acoustic guitar. The wedding party paddled to shore amid rounds of applause. The minister was the first to climb ashore, and happily accepted a shot of Muskol.

Later that afternoon the clouds rolled in and forced the reception indoors. Spirits were high, and Jodie's brother played some old John Denver tunes. He strummed "Take Me Home, Cottage Road", and "Gramma's Feather Bed." The guests sang along, and one fellow did some soft-shoe

THE EARTH SUMMIT in Brazil is taking place as I write this. I hope every caring person out there has kept the participant in their hearts and prayed that the choices they make will be strong. And that the power-mongers have finally come to understand that all the economic wealth in the world cannot buy us a new planet to live on, if their greed for power and money destroy our earth.

On the home front, Ed was speaking with a friend of ours a couple of weeks ago about a disturbing occurrence. It seems that a couple of discarded propane tanks were found floating around in Lake Kashagawigamog. Now, I understand that it is more expensive to have your propane tanks tested than to just discard them and buy new ones. I have also been told that the landfill sites will no longer take them. (which is certainly a good idea) However, one would hope that while the powers that be were banning disposal of these tanks at our dumps, they would post signs there listing places where they could be turned in. The Bagg family informs me that they sell reconditioned, refilled propane tanks for under $30., so there must be a depot out there somewhere.

It's very frightening to think what kind of nasty accident those floating tanks could cause on a lake as busy as Kashagawigamog.

I haven't written anything environmental for quite a while. Sometimes the whole ecological issue makes me feel a bit hopeless. As I said some months back, it's like beating my head against a brick wall. An d, after I wrote that in reference to the cardboard box issue, I soon received in the mail, not one, but two thick envelopes from the Haliburton County Waste Management Master Plan Study Coordinator. In those envelopes were fifteen sheets of un-recycled paper with photocopies (at last he used both sides) of various environmental information, including the Ontario Government Waste Management Master Plan, and my column. All of which I already had in my files. There were also two letters enclosed. One explaining that his position was that of Waste Management Master Plan "Study" Coordinator not Waste Management Master Plan Coordinator. The second missive stated that he 'came up with another thought. Since you are a concerned environmentalist, and write a weekly column in the "Echo", why not include a bit of environmental news of significance every week, or as it becomes available.?' (those are his punctuation marks.!? , not mine)

First, may I respectfully submit, sir, just what the heck do you think I've been doing?!

Second, if, as your first letter suggests, you weren't meant to coordinate anything more than a study, why was your predecessor, along with the County Planner, sitting at a meeting with me and a few other persons, discussing a cardboard box test collection?

Third, how many man hours, and how much

Employees need support

The staff at the Home has changed very little in the past few years. Changes in management and the board have been more frequent.

The employees at Hyland Crest by agreement cannot strike. Even if we had the right to strike we would not take this action because of our beliefs for the well-being and care of the residents, who we treat as being members of our family. Our only weapon is to make the public aware and ask for their support as well as the support of our elected council members.

Kudos for board

To the Editor:

The Board of Education for Haliburton County must be commended for refusing to institute a junior kindergarten program. It is a well established fact that children before the age of five, when subjected to a structured system, often sustain emotional and intellectual difficulties later in their school life. They are neither strong enough nor old enough to endure the classroom regime, the long tiring bus rides or the integration with other children. They are at an age when they are acquiring an enormous fund of knowledge just from observing things around them.

As a former school principal for eight years, I observed that even children who began attending kindergarten at the age of five have no advantage in learning over those beginning formal education at the age of seven.

Then there is the cost. The ratepayers would be required to bear the financial burden for accommodation, equipment and staff. If sufficient advantage for such a program could be shown then maybe the cost is justified but what if the program is in fact detrimental.

It must come as a surprise to any well-informed person on educational matters, to find the Department of Education even entertaining such a proposal.

Competition too much for high school at meet

by MARK PUBLICOVER

Staff Reporter

HHSS's potent track and field squad finally met their match last weekend and despite a good showing, didn't manage to pick up any hardware at the OFSAA championships in Toronto.

"It was pretty much as we expected," head coach Paul Morissette said. "We were pleased with our results but that was a very high level of competition—most of those kids practice year-round and many of them will compete in the Olympics someday."

Junior boys' pole vaulter Andres Weber was HHSS's best hope and made the final round but finished fifth with a height of 3.65m. The winner set a new OFSAA record with a height of 4.42m. Senior boys' sprinter Eric Johnson didn't make the final 400m hurdle race despite setting a personal best time of 56.6 seconds. Anna Tomlinson set a personal best in the midget girls' 80m hurdles of 13.4 seconds but finished fifth in her heat and the senior boys' 4 X 100m relay team (Greenfield, Johnson, Bart Given and Andy Bacon) and also achieved a personal best (43.6 seconds), but didn't make the final.

Junior boys' sprinter Chris Greenfield couldn't match the tremendous pace he set for himself after breaking records for the past five weeks and although he didn't make any of the OFSAA finals, he can be proud of a fine season in the all of the events he participated in.

Midget girls' high jumper Tiffany Orpana also did well but finished ninth overall. Bart Given bettered his time in the senior boys' 200m race but only finished seventh in his heat and Jamie Keefer also did well but didn't advance past his first heat in the junior boys' shot put.

Midget boys' hurdler Peter Brohman didn't compete due to a knee injury.

"Although we didn't win any medals, it was really enjoyable and the kids were exposed to some very talented athletes," Morissette said. "They were competing against future Olympians and years down the road when those other students do make the Olympics, our kids

Bobcaygeon out-hustles Rockcliffe to hand local fastballers first loss

by MARK PUBLICOVER

Staff Reporter

They started out right but ended wrong and Minden's Rockcliffe Hustlers suffered their first loss of the season as visiting Bobcaygeon scored once in the seventh to win 3-2 in Tri-County Fastball League action last Thursday.

Minden's first three batters all managed hits but only short stop Doug Shaw crossed the plate on a solo home run after lead-off man Tim Davies was caught on the base path. The speedy left-fielder was caught at second again on a disputed call in the third inning when he stretched a single into a solid double but kicked the base out of the way and was called out.

That was all until the top of the fifth, as Bobcaygeon put together a rally that brought two batters home and left one stranded. The Hustlers responded in their half of the inning when Ron Yake singled and then made it all of the way home on a single by Mike MacNaull.

The Hustlers continued to roll but MacNaull was thrown out on a fielder's choice after catcher Jamie Dollo's infield hit. Davies then singled for the third time but Dollo, the potential go-ahead run, was thrown out at the plate.

A scoreless sixth inning saw those fans who hadn't already done so seek cover from the dreaded hordes of mosquitos and the players were probably hoping the game wouldn't go into extra innings because they'd have no blood left.

To answer their prayers, Bobcaygeon got a single from Glen Oliver to lead off the seventh and he made it home on ground balls to put his team up by one again. Minden came back fighting as Yake and MacNaull each recorded their second hits of the evening, but they didn't make it to home plate and Bobcaygeon left victorious although seriously fly-bitten.

Minden hurler Brian Shaw had seven strikeouts and the team left four men stranded on nine hits. The two teams played a rematch last night in Bobcaygeon.

Two big innings lead Orioles to 22-10 romp

The Mosquito edition of the Haliburton Oriole franchise enjoyed its most lopsided victory of the season to date — rolling over Huntsville 22-10.

Going into the game, Huntsville was touted as being a team to be reckoned with, based solely on the performance of their last game — a 21-3 pasting of league rival Bracebridge. Five games into the schedule, the Orioles have discovered an important ingredient that has propelled this squad into first place — the ingredient being team glue. This sticky substance is responsible for gelling 15 ball players and ultimately providing the cohesion any sports team must have to be successful. The Oriole players show all the signs of coming together as a team, with everybody on the same page.

As eluded to, this game was one-sided as all the Haliburton players wore their hitting shoes to this one, pounding out

The first inning proved to be unnerving for Oriole fans as the top of the order went 1-2-3 for the first time this year. However, the Oriole defence behind starting pitcher Mike Morissette held fast as Morissette collected three strikeouts after issuing a lead-off walk.

The Orioles opened the second inning with three consecutive base hits as Jamie Johnston stroked a double, followed by singles from Jay Mole and Josh Shaw. This kind of damage led to four Oriole runs, as Devon Dart also scored courtesy of a McMahon sacrifice fly. Huntsville took advantage of some second inning wildness as the strike zone eluded the Oriole pitcher momentarily, long enough to tie the game at four.

The Haliburton team scored twice more in the third, sparked by a leadoff single from Danny Nielsen. However, the home team answered with three runs, taking a one run lead.

This was as close as Huntsville would come to the high-flying Orioles, as the road birds scored an amazing 16 runs over the last two innings, coasting to a convincing 22 to 10 victory. The big blows came from the bats of Shaw, Mulholland, Morrison, McMahon, Neville, Hall and Morissette, breaking a close game up and turning it into a rout.

Defensive player of the game honors goes to Jay Mole, who turned in some gems at his first base position in the early innings while the game was still undecided. Upcoming action for the Mosquito Orioles will see a mini home-stand, as Huntsville travels to Haliburton on Sunday, June 14 at 10 a.m. and Bracebridge returns the following Sunday at the same time.

Heating in the Winter. Air Conditioning in the Summer. It's all there, right under our Feet.

If you want to reduce your electric heating bill, look down at your feet. Now look a few feet further. Look at the earth itself. It could be your next source of heating and air conditioning.

Ground source heat pumps are designed to draw heat from the earth and pump it into your home. In the summer, the ground source heat pump reverses its operation. It extracts heat and humidity from your home and pumps it into the earth. The excess heat can also be used to heat domestic hot water or swimming pools and hot tubs.

This is truly the cleanest most efficient way to heat and air condition your home. And while ground source heat pumps cost more than traditional furnaces and air conditioners they soon pay for themselves with savings. That's why today's progressive home builders and renovators are specifying them for their clients.

Call us for more information about ground source heat pumps. You'll see that one of the most advanced technologies in heating and cooling is as old as the earth itself.

Commission wants municipalities to be responsible for septic systems

"The lakeshore development pattern is another form of settlement that has different aspects than rural and urban settlements," said David Story, the chairman of the Muskoka Round Table on the Environment and Economy.

Another hot topic of discussion Saturday was septic systems, which the Commission has recommended be taken over by municipalities and have certain restrictions put on them. In its latest list of draft goals and policies, published in the April edition of New Planning News, the Commission recommends that the use of conventional Class 4 tile bed systems be discouraged and not permitted at all in new multi-lot developments.

"We believe that having the municipalities take over responsibility for sewage systems would put too much burden on local taxes," Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations (FOCA) Vice-President Steve McKelvie said. "We also question how you can discourage the use of a legal septic system. They should either be endorsed or alternatives approved."

Story participated recently in a workshop involving other representatives from Muskoka and together, they prepared a response to the Sewell Commission's latest draft of goals.

"There was support (at the workshop) for the municipality to take over the responsibility for septic system approvals provided that adequate resources are transferred to the municipality to run the program and that the municipality can set its own standards that are appropriate for the specific region," he said.

He also said the recommendation to discourage the use of Class 4 septic systems was too restrictive.

"We can use other technologies, but the Ministry of the Environment won't look at them," he said.

Muskoka Lakes representative Fahner said that communal septic systems should be given more consideration for some developments, particularly in rural areas.

"On a typical 100-acre parcel in Muskoka, you may have 30 acres which are unusable, 50 acres which are usable but have shallow soils or poorly drained pockets and 20 acres with soil suitable for septic disposal systems," he told the Commission. "Today's requirements spread the development over the 70 acres with over half the tile fields located on marginal or substantial land."

"A communal system, however, could be placed on the 20 acres of good land with the homes on smaller lots near the communal septic system resulting in better assimilation of effluent, less contamination of the groundwater and preservation of a large area of open space."

An area where delegates differed was with public access to lakes. Fahner said Muskoka Lake Township strongly believes that existing public access to lakes and rivers must be maintained. "Lakes are a public resource," he said.

But FOCA's McKelvie said that organization believes there should not be a blanket policy on lake access, indicating that some lakes should not be accessible to the public (but he didn't elaborate further).

Of the 35 people who attended the forum, about a third addressed the Commission. Davis was the only delegate from Haliburton County and she told the Commission that reform of the planning laws should provide a more equitable distribution of the burden for protecting the environment.

"We say there can't be any more development around a lake because it's getting too polluted but we don't do anything to stop that pollution," she said. "We value our vistas but we shouldn't be told we can't develop."

It isn't fair for development on a lake to be frozen, she said, adding that the landowners who have developed must work together with those who haven't yet developed to reduce harm to the environment.

"Those who have developed go on abusing but the solution is to stop others from building because they might abuse also," she later told The Echo. "A person who hasn't developed yet is, in a sense, being punished while nothing is done to curb the harm being done to the environment."

At the forum, FOCA's McKelvie supported Davis' comments by giving an example where a dozen land owners around a lake developed their properties, polluted their lake, and then had development frozen and the rest of the land owners could no longer build.

"In cases like this," he said, "septics seem almost like an artificial planning tool—they restrict development because they're not effective enough. What happens when technology is improved and more effluent is prevented from reaching the water? What will stop development then?"

Respected salesman dies

Brant Stamp, owner of Brant Stamps Sales Ltd. in Haliburton, died May 28th at Minden Hospital of a heart attack. He was 62.

Mr. Stamp was known throughout the county for his honesty, integrity and personality — the same qualities that helped him achieve a successful career in sales. He had his own business in equipment sales, and before that, he owned a Ford Dealership and an International Dealership.

Mr. Stamp turned to sales after a lifetime of trucking in order to spend more time with his family — his wife Eileen and his daughters Brenda and Robin. His family was his priority. And when the family expanded to include two sons-in-law and four grandchildren, Mr. Stamp spent many Sunday afternoons cooking up his renowned fried chicken at family picnics.

Hunting and fishing were also important parts of Mr. Stamp's life. His proficiency with a rifle was well-established at local shooting matches and he was usually awarded with a first place finish in either horseshoes or the cross-cut competition on Canada Day.

Mr. Stamp was born and raised in Minden. He was the first child of Cecil and Hattie Stamp. In his early teens, the family moved to the head of Pine Lake. Most of his adolescent years were spent working with his father.

Although his education was limited, it didn't take him long to realize the potential of self-employment. Mr. Stamp ventured into several business opportunities including a B/A oil franchise and Coca-Cola distribution before eventually turning to sales.

Mr. Stamp, beloved husband of Eileen, father to Brenda Bain and Robin Woodcock, father-in-law to Roger Bain and Bob Woodcock, grandfather to Crystal, Curtis, Alana and Nathan, son-in-law of Myra Barry and brother to Marjorie Nicholls, Eunice Wright and Lyle Stamp, was laid to rest at Maple Lake United Church Cemetery on Saturday May 30th.

Trent study finds most students take the bus

by MARK PUBLICOVER

Staff Reporter

A study conducted by a Trent University bioregionalism student has found that almost three-quarters of the students in Haliburton County take a bus to school.

Information for the study, conducted by fourth-year students Andrea Hodgins and Ben Bradshaw, was done from information collected from 142 students in April, including 50 Grade 9 students, 54 students from Grades 4, 6 and 8 and 38 students from kindergarten and Grade 2.

The study found that 72-per cent of those surveyed take the bus to school, 24-per cent of whom travel for over 40 minutes each way and six-per cent travel over a hour each way. The majority of those surveyed were found to travel between 20 and 40 minutes each way.

Most of the students, the survey said, find the experience unpleasant and either talk to friends or listen to music during the ride.

The survey also cited a study conducted by the Ministry of Education back in 1976, which concluded that bussing has an adverse affect on a student.

"The longer a student spends on the bus each day, the more likely he (or she) is to be enrolled in basic or general-level rather than advanced-level courses; to be less successful in academic subjects than his (or her) local peers; to be absent and to drop out of school prior to graduation; and the less likely he (or she) is to engage in extracurricular activities," the study's author, Doris Ryan, is quoted as saying.

That study, entitled The Education of Adolescents in Remote Areas of Ontario, also outlines a number of impacts of long-distance bussing (over 60 minutes). Ryan interviewed parents, teachers, administrators and students in five high schools in Ontario and found that students bussed for long distances had more discipline problems, completed less homework, got less extra help and perceived they were treated differently by their teachers. Ryan attributed these findings to factors such as fatigue and the lack of comfort on a bus, and behavior problems during the ride (causing tension).

Ryan also found that students miss out on participating in extra-curricular activities but students in Haliburton County are able to take a late bus in order to remain at school longer and participate.

Private wells won't be taxed

"Sir Sam's (Ski Area) is a major tourist attraction," said Hodgson, agreeing that the repairs are imperative. However, unless the province kicks in, the municipality can't afford to do proper upgrading on its own.

Hutchinson was not bowled over by this argument. "We're tired of band-aiding... You've had lots of time to think of it, not just one year."

In other Eagle Lake news, council is close to reaching a settlement which will provide a parking area near Sir Sam's Inn for island cottagers.

Water conservation

Although agreeing that people need to be made more aware of the importance of water conservation, council feels penalizing people with private wells is not the solution to the looming problem of insufficient water supply in urban areas.

"When it comes to policing or taxing private water systems we don't think it's appropriate," said Hodgson. Leadbeater said "the difficulty we've got is separating our situation from a more general problem... I don't want to tax people for using water which is free, but I think some education is important."

Toronto's water table is falling, foretelling of problems in the future. The province is asking for response to its Water Efficiency Strategy Working Document, which alludes to taxing people with private water supplies, such as wells. Except for Minden and Cardiff Township residents, Highlanders rely on private wells.

New park?

A public park may be created on Cruiser Lake, a privately-owned lake near Kennis Lake. Gary Vasey, representing Shall-May Holdings, has applied to create nine lots. Thirteen are permissible on the lake, which has not yet been developed and may be designated a non-motor lake. The municipality is entitled to land or money equal to five percent of the development's value, but because the lots are being created by severances, which is faster than a plan of subdivision, Hodgson feels the municipality could justifiably receive more.

"If you're going to take land for the public, the public should have access to it," said the reeve, who suggested requiring the developer to give the municipality a block of land with about 250 feet of shoreline. As well, the developer would build a road to the lake. The municipality would then be responsible for summer maintenance.

"When you can, it seems to me you should do it," said Leadbeater. Many lots which the municipality receives are not suitable for road access.

Tree by-law

The province's proposed tree by-law will add an unnecessary level of bureaucracy, says Councillor Curry Bishop. "This is another thing we'll have to enforce and I'm not for regulations... To tell you you can't grow a certain type of flower in your garden, that's the way it's going. It's just another restriction and another thing you have to administer."

However, Leadbeater said that regulations will reflect the need for sustained development. It's better to control the cutting of trees now so mills can stay open, rather than cut down all the trees and precipitating the closure of mills. "I don't like the thought of no regulations."

The province wants to give municipal by-laws some teeth when it comes to controlling how many trees are cut down on private property.

County council feels the matter is under the jurisdiction of the MNR. "We didn't get into a philosophical debate," said Hodgson. Dysart already has a by-law which to a certain extent controls the cutting of trees.

MOE interference

The Ministry of Environment says it will immediately restrict the creation of more than five lots by severance. The ministry wants to discourage the use of private water and sewage systems for multi-lot developments. "If this happens, you won't see much development," said Planning Administrator Jody Curry. Dysart currently allows up to nine lots to be created by severance as long as certain conditions are being met. The MOE now says that if any more than five lots are created by severance, municipal sewage and water facilities must be available. Nowhere in Dysart are both services provided.

The ministry's proposal "makes a mockery of the consultation process," said Hodgson. The Sewell Commission is touring the province to come up with recommendations for changing the Planning Act and yet by changing the rules now, the ministry is over-riding that process.

Cottage life

Two Lake Kashagawigamog cottagers got a lot more than they bargained for when they applied to purchase their shoreline allowance. Trudy and Morley Clarke of Kashaga Drive discovered that nearly all of their two bunkies, storage shed, pumphouse and cottage are built on the municipal road allowance.

As well as agreeing to the sale of the 66' shoreline allowance, council will also sell a small sliver of a road allowance, which part of the cottage is built on.

Long-time rural route driver retires

Grant will build community centre

There will soon be a new community centre on the property of Camp Dorset thanks to funding from the provincial government. The grant, from the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation's Fresh Approach program, is for $454,973.

"The development of this community centre will be of benefit to both the disabled persons who use the amp, as well as to the local citizens, who will also have access to these facilities," said

MTR Minister Peter North. "It is important that people of all ages and abilities have access to recreational facilities, and we are pleased to be working with the local community and the camp personnel in order to provide these much needed amenities."

Camp Dorset, a special camp for families that need kidney dialysis treatments, will use the funds to build a new 10,000 sq. ft. building and recreation area complete with tennis and basketball courts, a reading area, and a mess area. The project will make the camp accessible in the off-season (May-June and September-November) and allow the camp to program activities for 200 families with 600 children.

"This community centre will quickly become a centre for activities of both the local com-

Covered bridges back on road to popularity

by LAURA CAMPBELL
Special to the Echo

WHEN ONE HEARS the term "covered bridge", images of a rolling green countryside, babbling brook and horse-and-carriage usually come to mind. They've been part of our heritage for a thousand years with the basic design dating back to the Vikings.

But do they have a place in the modern world?

Local builder Alfredo Rico of Northern Timberhouse Ltd. believes that not only are they viable in today's towns and countryside, but also in the larger cities. To prove this he and his crew will participate in the construction of one in Guelph during the annual conference of the Timber Framers' Guild of North America, June 9-13.

This historic event will see the rise of only the second covered bridge in Ontario today. It is going to be a fully enclosed foot bridge approximately 120 feet in length crossing the Speed River. The actual design is based on the one that was patented by Ithiel Town in 1820.

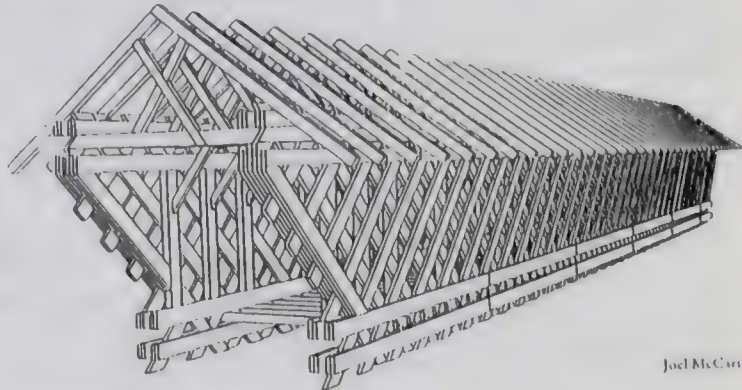

Rico, a veteran timber-framer for 15 years and one of the founders of the Guild, is excited about the conference as he has never participated in the actual construction of a covered bridge before. "It's going to be a heavy-duty learning experience as we're going to be exposed to a lot of knowledge and experience."

"The conference gives us a good chance to meet with our peers as we're very few."

However, the concept of building such a bridge is not new to Rico. "In the summer of 1991, Northern Timberhouse submitted the suggestion of a covered bridge for the new St. Peter's bridge in Stanhope Township... We were pleased that the idea was considered even though it was eventually abandoned."

He is hoping to gain a lot by the conference as he sees a revival of

*These offers may not be combined or used in combination with any other offer except the College Graduate Program. Offers apply to 1992 new and unused, or demonstrator models purchased from dealer inventory. Offers valid for a limited time starting May 22, 1992 while quantities last and applies to retail deliveries only. Cash back offer includes GST. Financing offer available with no limit on the amount financed, to qualified retail buyers financing their purchases through GMAC on a maximum 48 month contract. Example: For $12,000 financed over 48 months at 3.9% APR, the monthly payment is $270.41, the cost of borrowing is $979.66 and the total amount to be repaid is $12,979.66. Assuming a rebate of $1,000 as the alternative, should you choose the reduced financing rate, legislation requires that the amount of the rebate must be included in the cost of borrowing in order to arrive at an effective interest rate. In the example given, the effective interest rate would be 7.45% APR, and the total cost of borrowing, including the rebate not taken, would be $1,914.26. Some conditions apply. Firm to evaluate dump options

by NANCY KUZMICH

Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at last Wednesday's regular meeting of Glamorgan council:

Trees Act

Council had invited Dave Leader, a senior forest technician from the Ministry of Natural Resources in Minden, to address the meeting regarding the Trees Act. This act, which was established in 1947, is not mandatory but it enables municipalities to pass by-laws protecting trees and woodlots from development pressures. It only affects private landowners. Haliburton County has such a by-law but it doesn't cover Glamorgan Township.

Leader said the purpose of the county's by-law was to protect young timber from premature harvesting, to protect shores, roads and developments from un-regulated harvesting and to protect deer from loss of conifer cover.

But there are now proposed changes to the act which will have considerable effect on local by-laws. Right now townships are not covered under the act but the new recommendations say they should be. Only property-owners with two or more acres fall under the current act but the proposed amendments will cover every single tree on private land.

"This isn't saying we're going ahead (with a by-law). It's just to tell us how it affects us — if we want into it or not," said Reeve Beverly MacDuff.

"We haven't had a problem with anyone murdering the bush," added Deputy-reeve Glen Madill.

"You have to weigh how far you're willing to go and how far private land owners are willing to go," said Leader.

Landfill Saga

Conestoga-Rovers, a consultant engineering firm from Waterloo, has taken pictures and samples at the Glamorgan dump. They have given council an idea of where they're at and where they should go from here in terms of expansion and the rate at which the site is filling up. Before any options can be presented, they will need information which includes the amount of population served by the site (if over 1,500 people, Glamorgan landfill will fall under the Environmental Assessment Act which will mean public hearings regarding the dump situation), why the site is filling up faster than Conestoga predicted in 1988, current impact of the site (if any) on the quality of the Irondale River water based on this month's test results, detailed survey site, the determination of remaining site capacity and the possibility of a liaison with the Ministry of Environment.

Council passed a resolution that authorized Conestoga-Rovers to obtain this information which is necessary to evaluate the different options available to them. The cost is not to exceed $2,900.

"We have to do it," said Reeve MacDuff. "We have no choice."

In the meantime, Bill Thompson from the MOE had some information regarding council's hopes for a burn site application. He said the central director doesn't like burn sites and will only approve them in extenuating circumstances.

Council now has two choices: proceed with the application and then appeal if turned down or if they expand the present site, put in a provision for landfilling brush. Thompson said the second alternative would be the most likely in this particular case.

This issue will remain on hold until Conestoga's results are in.

"For us to make application right now is a waste of time," said the reeve.

Some of the excess garbage will be removed by the Fenelon Falls-based A & E Contracting who want all the scrap metal left at the site.

This service is of no charge to the taxpayer.

The immediate problem is that people are still dumping garbage outside the gate after hours.

"We should contact people," said Councillor Lorrie Saville. "Bags and boxes shouldn't be left at the gate when closed."

Council has adopted a new resolution that any such complaints will now go the community police officer for the necessary action.

Tamarack Lake

The Tamarack Lake Property Owners petition to environmentally protect Tamarack Lake against use of motor boats or crafts is now a declaration on file.

What that means is council passed a resolution to sponsor them providing they meet certain requirements. That includes everyone who owns land on the lake must be notified of the intent and those that haven't signed the petition know about it and agree. In addition, the association must purchase, erect and maintain any signs and pay all costs connected with the petition. When all the requirements are met, the township on behalf of the property owners, will make application to the Ministry of Natural Resources to have the lake environmentally protected.

"the community support and the enthusiasm of the camp staff has made this a wonderful project to be involved with. This money will also bring over 700 person days of employment to the area, which is welcome during times like these."

Waste comes in mail Job taught skills for living material (un-recycled paper, ink, photo-copy use, etc.) did you waste at the tax-payer's expense to litter my house, and raise my blood pressure?

Fourth, one of the sheets of photo-copy was rather interesting in an ironic sort of way. On one side of this sheet was a piece of useless information about what to put/ and not to put in blue boxes or blue bins. Useless, because, as anyone will tell you, if you have blue boxes, as some apartment buildings do, no matter how carefully you obey the directions, when the boxes are picked up, the stuff gets all mixed together along with the garbage. If you take your recyclables to a blue bin, they are overflowing all over the ground in 'most' places. They are also littered with bags. And, of course, right at the bottom of this page is a very careful description of how to prepare our corrugated cardboard boxes.

On the other side of this sheet was "To conserve or Consume; Take the Test." I scored a 190 out of a possible 200 points. You see, there was this question about how do I dispose of hazardous wastes. The correct answer, of course, was 'at a toxic waste depot.' My answer was 'in my storage until the Haliburton County Waste Management Master Plan decides to have a toxic waste collection.' The other question I missed was 'What will you do with this publication when you've finished with it?' they didn't list my choice.

nothing gets sawdust out of woolen work socks...

But I was soon inside clipping together cone-shaped springs into car seats and backs, and dipping those little round springs called helicals in vats of black paint before they were annealed in giant ovens to turn them from mere twisted wire into tight, tough springs. (About all I learned here was that, if you spilled enough paint on your workpants, they'd stand up after you got out of them...)

But by the summer, I had a job as a "floater," fitting into the various jobs throughout the plant while the regular staff were on vacation. A big product line was the Springtime Stroller, which was a baby carriage that came apart to make a stroller as the baby grew.

By the end of the summer, I had learned how to do just about every single step involved in turning flat sheets of metal and rolls of wire into these wheeled wonders. I wasn't involved in painting them their distinctive dark blue, and I never learned the sewing process for the carriage body and hood — but that's about all I missed.

Aside from a lot of individual manual skills I learned — ones I might never have experiences in the academic stream at school — I also learned to work with people from a lot of different backgrounds. They're both kinds of experience that the kids are missing out on in today's bitter economy.

Oddly enough, that same economy has apparently put an end to what used to be the Waterloo Spring Company. In the good times, they expanded into a number of furniture-related metal and wire production areas including the mechanisms for sofa-beds and recliner chairs — and that expanded operation was put up for sale at public auction just last month...

outside in the rain.

After dinner Jodie asked me if I would like to see her motorcycle. I said yes and followed her outside. It was a 450 Nighthawk, candy-apple-red. It was gorgeous and I told her so.

"Todd gave it to me instead of an engagement ring," she giggled.

"Romantic guy."

"I never liked rings," she admitted. "they aren't very practical. At least you can ride a bike."

Later still, after the storm had cleared and the cake was all gone, Jodie and Todd changed into their leathers, mounted the Nighthawk, put on their helmets, and rode off.

When the dust settled, Jodie's parents strolled down to the dock, and waited for the solitary headlight to cross the bridge across the bay. when it did, they knew they were gone.

"It was a nice wedding, wasn't it?" said Jodie's mother.

I had to agree that it was.

"It was easy-going, just like Jodie," she said.

"Just like Kennisis," her husband added.

ter when a dog could run freely across a frozen lake!

The odd vehicle might drive by as the two of them walked along that country road. Sylvia knew the people must have thought her mad to be out in the bug-infested air, dressed like a Martian, waving a greeting as though it was the most natural thing in the world. She told herself she would be slim and trim when they developed middle-age spread, so these morning walks were well worth the discomfort. And this was an unpleasant environment for such a short time.

She concentrated on the early morning sun sparkling in the mirror calm of the lake; the honk of Canada geese newly arrived and busy with their young; a fat porcupine lumbering purposefully across the road ahead of them. Sylvia enjoyed these experiences more than she could say. If only, she thought, holding the dog until the porcupine had safely disappeared into the bush, if only it would turn very windy for the first two weeks of June.

Long-time Frost Centre secretary will dance into retirement sunset

by JANET HURLEY
Staff Reporter

The Frost Centre's loss has become the Scottish Country Dancers' gain. Kathleen Owens is planning to spend more time dancing now that she has retired from the Leslie M. Frost Natural Resources Centre after 31 years in the clerical department.

"I really enjoy Scottish country dancing. It's good exercise as well as being a lot of fun. I hope to get more involved," said Miss Owens who is planning to attend the Gaelic College in Cape Breton this August to take classes in Scottish dance as well as in piano accompaniment for Scottish fiddle music.

Miss Owens, 59, may have trouble squeezing dancing into her already busy schedule. Six days after she officially retired on May 8th, she was off to Victoria, B.C. and Tisdale, Sask. for two weeks with her sister and brother-in-law. And now that she's back, she is in the process of moving from her home in Pine Springs to a house on Green Lake, near West Guilford.

Plus she has several other interests she hopes to pursue such as upgrading her piano skills, knitting and reading.

"And I want to visit my friends, now that I have the time to visit them."

Although Miss Owens is glad to be retired, she said she sometimes misses working at the Frost Centre.

"I miss the people I worked with. Nearly everyday was a challenge, but I always found it stimulating. I enjoyed my work."

Miss Owens was hired by the Frost Centre in 1961 after taking a six-month secretarial course at Shaw College. When she started, the centre was a training institution called the Forest

Kathleen Owens can do the fling full-time

Ranger School. In 1974, it became the outdoor education centre that it is today.

"My job stayed pretty much the same. For the others that worked there, it involved more change for them. The entire instructional staff was completely turned over. They all got jobs with the Ministry of Natural Resources elsewhere."

"The administration staff didn't grow that much. But the staff has changed over the years. Harvey Barnhart was the maintenance supervisor and he retired last year. He was the only one who had worked there as long as me. When he left, the staff had completely changed from the day I started."

Miss Owens spent her days typing letters, memos and reports as well as other clerical duties. The office equipment she used changed tremendously over the years.

"We went from typing on manual typewriters right to computers. I did find it hard switching to computer but I didn't mind it once I got used to it."

But what was it about her job that made her stay for 31 years?

"For one thing, it was steady employment. I liked the location — it was beside a lake. I enjoyed the people I worked with....And I was always interested in what the centre was doing — in the forestry part of it, the biology and the lands and minerals."

When Miss Owens retired, the staff at the Frost Centre threw her a party.

"I knew about the party, but there were some surprises."

She didn't expect her brother-in-law Earl Cooper to pipe her in nor did she expect her nephew from Moncton, N.B. to attend.

One big surprise was her retirement gift — a kilt and sash made from the Lamont tartan, her family clan.

"It was such a thrill. I never expected a gift like that. It's an expensive gift and such a lovely gift to receive."

The Scottish Country Dancers attended the party as well and presented her with a set of luggage.

But it was another gift that touched her heart — the Scottish Country Dancers performed a dance composed just for her and it was called the "Miss Kathleen Owens."

'I really enjoy Scottish country dancing. It's good exercise and a lot of fun' these bridges in the United States which will eventually come to Canada and hopefully as far north as Haliburton County. "In the next ten years there'll be a strong revival and for us a bright future."

One reason for this may be due to recent research in the U.S. that found wooden bridges to last longer. "The life span of a steel and concrete bridge is from 20 to 30 years, compared to 70 to 75 years for wooden bridges."

As well, Rico notes that the rustic covered bridges draw tourists and enhance the countryside. "Our feeling is that covered bridges in the County, whether for vehicles or foot paths, could become a feature to attract tourists to this area, in addition to being enjoyable and attractive reminders of our rural Ontario heritage."

The long, long, looong road to Algonquin Park

by NANCY KUZMICH

Staff Reporter

THE EXPRESSION "getting there is half the battle" doesn't do justice to travelling the Haliburton Lake route into Algonquin Park.

My assignment: to ride the wilderness trail via one of Haliburton County's accesses into the provincial sanctuary. Dress appropriately (blackfly not blacktie) and enjoy, my editor said.

That part of it I was prepared for, even looked forward to. What I wasn't expecting was the trip to hell and back.

Granted, there were a couple of bright spots during my day in the "wilds". My two guides were wonderful and I loved our ultimate destination, the hunt camp on the north shore of Upper Redstone Lake (and I'm not really into hunting.)

But my strongest memory is limping into my office after the five-hour return trip to the park. I was a human jellyfish — my spine felt shattered. Try riding for that length of time over old logging roads made of — what else? — logs and stones, with quite a few areas washed out. Then imagine riding on those kind of roads for that long in the middle of a pick-up seat.

It was bright and early when I arrived at Bert Cowan's house in West Guilford. He was to be my guide/chauffeur/companion for the day's journey. Bert brought his friend Carl Sawyer and the three of us hit it off immediately.

As we headed out of West Guilford in Bert's Ford 4x4 (with the ATV in the back cab), Bert and Carl informed me that there are actually three entrances into Algonquin Park's McRae Addition from Haliburton County. One is from Elephant Lake near Harcourt which, although it's the smoothest path, both men nixed because it was too far from our departure point. Another route is through the Haliburton Forest & Wild Life Reserve on Kennis Lake but travellers must pay a toll. So we went the way Bert usually goes — Haliburton Lake Road, turning on to Ross Lake Road and then the first right hand road after that. Beyond that point you're on a narrow, winding dirt road barely wide enough for one vehicle. Eventually you'll pass through the Bishop hunting grounds where gates to keep trespassers out are open and unattended, as though acknowledging the futility of standing in the way of anyone determined enough to use this trail in the first place.

"You'd only want to travel this route from June through October," said Bert. "And even then, you'd want four-wheel drive."

What an understatement. Even with Bert's sturdy 4x4, the three of us held our breath as we overcame gigantic rocks and log ends sticking up at odd angles in the road. Several times both Bert and Carl got out of the Ford to remove the larger obstacles a a Sherman tank would enjoy and to pull off protruding tree branches that would have scratched the truck's finish.

Bert says he wouldn't mind if this access was paved to encourage sightseeing.

"It wouldn't hurt a bit. Most people would use it in the summer anyway, and I'm using it in the fall during hunting season. Actually, please say in the paper that it needs paving!"

He breaks off to point out a huge rock formation on our left.

"There's Old Baldy. You know if you come across that, you're going the right way into our camp."

Now there is no possible way I can guide anyone to where we went that Wednesday. I know we entered the McRae Addition, the parcel of land adjacent to the bottom perimeter of Algonquin Park. It's part of Eyre township in the municipality of Dysart et al. The 1989-90 Master Plan Review recommended that the Addition become part of the park.

Although there are no markers, Bert and Carl don't need them. They can tell by a turn in the road or a certain pine grove or one of the hydro towers in a power line that Bert believes was installed in 1947.

"It must have been then because the line was sure going strong by the time I married in '49."

Carl, meanwhile, is pointing out how fortunate we've been because there haven't been any forest fires here for a long time. Then, amazingly, he adds:

"But luckily the road is in such good shape, there'd be no trouble gaining access from the county in case of a fire."

As we make our way through "God's Country", where the bleak landscape of trees and rock is broken only by the line of hydro towers marching on to what seems eternity, we begin the really fun part of the trip.

"Now we're on the corduroy road," says Bert.

He's got my attention now because I remember that term from my favourite t.v. genre — westerns. Primitive paths made of logs.

"Those logs are here so the road doesn't bog out," my guides explain as we past through swampland.

While I adjust to the bouncing, bone-shaking bumps that are now to be our constant companions, both men have their heads hanging out their windows and appear quite excited.

"Moose tracks," is the verdict. "Heading our way."

I grab my camera bag from between Carl's feet and start the usual checklist to make sure it's ready to go. It would be just my luck to have the moose materialize out of nowhere and there'd be no film in the camera.

Alas, although there would be other photo opportunities, that moose — who might have finally given my picture-taking credentials the legitimacy that has so far eluded them — missed our appointment with destiny. Having gone into the bush with high hopes of coming back with an 8" - 10' glossy of not only the moose but also the equally camera-shy bear or wolf, I didn't even capture on film the small snowshoe rabbit we saw.

Bert and Carl provided an ongoing monologue about the terrain's points of interest. Two splake lakes over there, the spot where Bert's car got stuck in 1977 because it was only a two-wheel drive, an old chesterfield that had been left behind long after hunters had departed the area.

And still we kept driving, driving.

Bert made the big mistake of turning the volume up on the truck radio. By the time he realized it was a Toronto rock station left on after his son used the truck it was too late. What else but rock 'n' roll on a road that does the same thing?

Bert had promised that we would come across the remains of a logging camp which he believed dated back to before the turn of the century. Sure enough, we eventually came into a clearing and Bert stopped the truck. Bert led us back into the brush surrounding the clearing and pointed out a rusted out plough that would have been horse-drawn. Beside it was the log remains of what we at first thought might have been a bunkhouse for the loggers but after closer examination proved to be an old outhouse. This proved to be the joke for the remainder of our trip since I had made it known that I had to go to the washroom.

Beauty finds its match in the Highlands

So far we had not seen anything that we couldn't have found in Haliburton or West Guilford. Lots of trees, lakes, and beaver dams though. But no beavers and in fact, except for the aforementioned rabbit and a woodchuck or two, no wildlife at all. Shortly after our brief stop, Bert pointed out a sign saying we were leaving the Algonquin Park boundaries. Confusing as this may sound, we had entered the McRae Addition, then the park proper and were now driving back into the McRae Addition.

Bert and Carl then gave me a choice. After saying that the scenery would not be any different at the camp which was as far again as we had just come (meaning another hour-and-a-half) they asked if I wanted to continue on or just go a little bit further and then turn back. When they assured me there were washroom facilities at their camp, there was no contest. On we'd go for another 90 minutes.

Although the scenery wasn't any different than down our way, the sense of isolation was. So much so that when we finally came across two young men on an ATV, I was never so happy to see fellow humans. We stopped to talk to them about their hunting and fishing successes.

The closest call came in the most picturesque spot. As Bert pointed out, there aren't many mature trees left along our route. Most of it is brush. But at this time of year with the dogwood blooming, it looked fresh and green. A creek was merrily babbling along. Only problem was it had merrily eroded our road. A makeshift log "bridge" had been constructed and a huge piece of plywood had been thrown on top. Bert still had his snowplough harness attached to the front of his truck and it was catching on the plywood. We seemed doomed until Carl got out and carried stones to prop up the piece of plywood. Only then did the truck make it over. For me, a city girl who thought the 4x4 gods ruled the earth up here, it was a devastating lesson in their vulnerability.

But then a bright note. Bert assured me we were only a couple of miles away from the hunt camp. It seemed too good to be true. But on timberland trails, it might as well have been 10 miles since we were a long time getting there. When the hunt camp appeared out of the bush, I was in for another surprise. Instead of the tents I was expecting, there was a group of long, low cabins and yes, an outhouse. For someone who loathes any form of camping, this place still seemed like the Waldorf-Astoria.

In the kitchen cabin, there was a long table and all the comforts of home including a cook-stove, fridge, and all kinds of food. Bert's wife had very kindly packed us a lunch which we ate while exchanging our views on everything from cooking to living together before marriage and birth control. Hey, after two-and-a-half hours together in a pick-up, you have no secrets! In that short hour, I finally had an inkling of the camaraderie that is part of belonging to a hunt camp. Just you and your friends way out in the middle of nowhere, depending on each other for companionship and, if needed, aid.

Afterwards, Bert took me on a tour of the other buildings which included the bunkhouse complete with adjoining card-playing room. All on the shores of this incredibly beautiful lake. Standing down by the dock, it was easy to visualize Native North Americans paddling by; their birchbark canoes filled to overflowing with rich, glossy beaver pelts. That scenario belongs to the 17th Century but I'm convinced the geography remains unchanged. It is so unspoiled.

Unfortunately our time there was too brief; the long trek back to civilization beckoned. By this time it was mid afternoon and although we talked about making a Ford commercial and enjoyed a good laugh at how far my Toyota Celica would have gotten on the loggers' trail, we were a far more subdued trio than when we started out that morning.

After Bert and Carl caught on to the fact that I was quiet because I was tired they repeatedly appealed to me to make myself comfortable and go to sleep. Hah. By this time I had given up trying to reach any degree of comfort and was slouched down in the middle of the front seat with my feet on top of poor Carl's. Carl was holding my camera and was taking his turn on "The Moosewatch". My pen and tablet were in my lap and I knew much as I wanted to, I couldn't go to sleep. I might miss something. As it turned out, I miscalculated how far back it was because everytime we left "power line alley" and headed back into the bush, I was sure we'd come out at Haliburton Lake. And everytime I was sure, we'd resurface at yet another point on the long road home.

Finally, we came upon the original dirt road that was an offshoot of County Road 14 which goes through Fort Irwin. At the top of the road, was a machine with a giant scoop loading logs onto a truck. Bert and Carl stopped so I could watch for a while and then a couple of more miles and — PAVEMENT!

I was never so glad to see a real road in my life. No matter that it was just a county road; the Q.E.W. couldn't have compared.

Bert had set his odometer when we left the camp and he broke the astounding news to me that we had only gone about 120 km, round trip. In five, long hours.

Anyone contemplating one of the Haliburton County accesses into Algonquin Park would be better to either take the trip out to Elephant Lake Road or to pay a toll going through Haliburton Forest.

If it's breathtaking scenery you're after, however, you won't find any nicer than what's around the county. And driving around on county roads will be not only easier on your vehicle; when you do see those picture-perfect spots (or that moose) it'll be a high moment during an enjoyable trip rather than a desperate trophy after a gruelling endurance trek.

Thanks, Bert and Carl.

CURTIN CALL

A local landscape artist unveils his show at the Rails' End Gallery

by JANET HURLEY

Staff Reporter

Canadian landscape artist Joe Curtin isn't surprised or put off by the reaction his paintings evoke.

"People have come in and there are startled shouts of, 'Oh, that's my house' or 'I know where that is.' That isn't what art is about, but it's fun anyway," says Curtin whose paintings of Haliburton County hang in the Rail's End Gallery.

Curtin's show, entitled The Haliburton Conspiracy: A Collusion Between a Painting Technique and the Haliburton County Environment to Produce Art, is a collection of 21 acrylic paintings of local scenes such as the old general store in Gelert, a view of the Drag River and a yellow house in Minden.

Curtin says he was thinking of the folk music group, the Perth County Conspiracy, when he came up with the title for his show. He was also thinking about what he wanted to say through his work.

"I felt that this particular show was a kind of private, quiet conspiracy between a painting technique and the qualities of the local landscape to bring about an effect which might encourage people to see these scenes with sensitivity and appreciation which they might otherwise be inclined not to do."

"And it was an excuse to use a catchy title," he adds with a smile.

Curtin has been painting scenes in Haliburton County for many years. Although a native of Toronto, he spent his summers as a child at the family cottage in Ingoldsbay. He now owns the property and divides his time between Haliburton and Toronto.

"I have a deep seeded affection for Haliburton County...for the local people and the institutions."

Curtin has found that the county has the esthetic qualities he prefers to paint — a special combination of light, typography and colour. And he has not found an area that affects him as much despite the fact that he has painted numerous other places.

"I've done street scenes in Toronto, but I'm most interested in this area and in memorializing it."

Curtin, who received his fine art training at the University of Toronto, has worked in New York, Hollywood and San Francisco. He was employed by animation studios and advertising firms and he continued to study at several art schools. Eventually, he decided to make landscape art his career.

He describes his style as a "kind of distant satellite of the Group of Seven with overtones of artists like American landscaper Edward Hopper and a group of impressionists in the San Francisco Bay area called the Group of Six."

Curtin now exhibits in Toronto through the Shelly Lamb Gallery, but this is the first time he has completed such an extensive one-man show.

"My objective was to assemble a body of work that would evoke unique qualities of light and landscape that I personally seem to feel exists in this geography called Haliburton."

He took three years to complete the exhibit. He says he painted more than 21 scenes, but the ones on display were selected because they most represent the message he is trying to convey. His favourite piece is of the United Church in Haliburton.

"It's well done and it sort of reflects the feeling of the brilliant summer light and the deep green that is identified with this county in mid-summer, plus the quiet quality of village life."

Although Curtin is a "landscape" artist, he does not limit himself to the natural landscape. His paintings always include a dam or a house, or some other man-made structure.

"I'm not solely interested in the natural landscape but also in the man-made landscape as used and occupied by the people in this county."

Curtin says he hopes his show, which runs until June 20th, will stimulate some local interest in the surrounding environment.

"It's a wonderful world we have here and it would be nice to have people see it and appreciate it."

WWII pilot attends reunion

by NANCY KUZMICH

Staff Reporter

Although it can't possibly be the best time of his life, Jack Fleming is eager to revisit it.

On June 26, the 71-year-old Haliburton resident will fly from Toronto to Cold Lake, Alberta (courtesy of Canadian Armed Forces) for the 50th reunion of his R.C.A.F. squadron's formation.

He and those remaining of the 28 other Spitfire pilots whose tour of duty was flying over Nazi-occupied France in 1944, will be visiting the current edition of their Squadron 441 at the Northern Alberta base. Activities planned for the two day anniversary include a fly-pass and ground show of the F-18s currently used by the forces.

When asked what he thinks of the high-tech F-18s compared to the Spitfire single-seater fighter, Fleming is quick to reply.

"No comparison. It's like a Ford and a Cadillac!"

He was 22 years old and living in Toronto when he joined the air force in 1942. Realizing he would have to serve eventually, he knew if he joined voluntarily he could pick the branch that he wanted to serve with.

"It wasn't patriotism."

That pragmatic attitude vanished when deciding how to choose the branch.

"I guess if anything the air force was more glamorous."

Glamour is not what he got however when he was shot down on June 30, 1944, only a month after flying top cover for the D-Day Allied troops at Normandy. The flight lieutenant was to spend a year in German concentration camp Stalagluft 1 near Baith in the north. There were 10,000 in the camp, mostly Americans. Although they, like their counterparts in Stalag 3 (who participated in the infamous Great Escape) tunneled in the hopes of freeing themselves, after eight months, the camp officers collapsed their escape route. What really smarted was the Germans telling them they had known of the tunnel all along but let the P.O.W.s dig to keep them busy and out of trouble.

Although they were treated fairly, just before Christmas, 1944, the Red Cross food rations ran out. Then it was straight German rations, consisting of rotten potatoes, turnips and black bread. Fleming lost 45 pounds during his year as a P.O.W., most of it during that Christmas.

"We were hungry" is what he remembers most about the experience.

On May 1, 1945, the camp was liberated by the Russian army although the first troops to reach them were Mongols.

"It took two days before the Russian army got through!"

That saga will be just one of the tales exchanged between the squadron survivors, who camped in locations all over England while practicing maneuvers for the D-Day invasion.

Other memories for Fleming including shooting down two German fighters, over which he has no regrets.

"Either you shoot them down or they'll shoot you down."

Nowadays, the only survival instinct the Mountain Street resident practices is on the golf course. The retired accountant enjoys a lifestyle he and others like him helped preserve in the community where he cottaged for years on Koshlong Lake. But he's preparing to get on the job again as he will be bringing back reports on how the reunion went and they will be published in this paper in July.

Jack Fleming sits with his daughter, Jan Tedford, who was born two days before he was shot down by the Germans on June 30, 1944.

Legion elects its officers

The Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 519, Cobocok, held their election of officers on May 11, and the following officers were elected: President - Jack Backwell; First Vice President - Al Hall; Second Vice President - Laurie Backwell; Third Vice President - Doug Melbourne; Secretary - Norma Duncett; Treasurer - Nancy Mathewson; Executive - Aggie Brown, Mary Michel, Barbara Backwell, Al Franklin, Bonnie Camarand, Chris Ryan.

Congratulations to Reg and Winnie Cook, who celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary with family and friends. On a sad note Reg had an emergency trip to hospital on Wednesday.

Get well wishes to Harry Basinger who is in Ross Memorial Hospital. Tanya Richmond is doing well after her stay in a Toronto hospital.

Kelly Prentice is also doing well following surgery in St. Joseph's hospital in Peterborough.

It is good to see Frances Grant out and about again. Fran was a very sick lady and had a lengthy stay in Ross Memorial hospital. Likewise Bob Atkinson is out and about, after having a liver transplant in Toronto.

The local quarry began regular blasting procedures on May 28. Shots will occur between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Previous to a blast, warning signals are sounded. The five minute warning is three long blasts of the siren, the one minute warning is one long, and the all clear signal, after the blast is one long siren.

Elva Hannitani celebrated her 85th birthday recently and her son Wiley, and his wife Eta, held open house so her many friends and relatives could drop by and give Elva birthday greetings. This is one senior lady who is very active, taking in the Seniors Activities, and going out walking with her neighbour, Mildred Faulkner or a family, who have been a source of joy in her life and have been her main concern.

My column has been neglected since we've been busy sprucing up an older house. We've been nailing, plastering and painting for weeks — now about finished, thank goodness!

Ye Olde Jailhouse will be open six days a week, beginning on June 27th. This is the Seniors "store" where their many crafts are offered for sale, or for you to just drop in and browse.

Sympathy goes out to Theodore Cragg and family in the death of his wife, Dorothy.

Congratulations to George and Margaret Quibell who celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last week.

Philip Schell of Oshawa was a recent visitor of his aunt, Clara Schell and Ruth Fralick.

Get well wishes to Tom Bowins, who is not feeling so well.

A public meeting was held on May 13 in the community Hall, regarding the new sewers. The meeting was to inform the public about streets being serviced, and areas that would not be serviced, the cost to the homeowner and the yearly maintenance fee. It seems our soil is no longer able to handle sewage and the new system, with the lagoon located north east of town, will greatly benefit all of the town. Right now, our streets are rough and ragged and we have to detour around a lot of construction equipment, but if we are all patient, things will level out.

The tulips were really lovely along the river bank, thanks to the Horticulture Society, too bad their beauty is so short lived.

With the warmer temperatures, the village is alive with visitors again. Yard Sales were a big attraction to many. Lets hope the black flip and mosquitoes are soon gone — but they are still a better sight than snow!

Carnarvon news

The next meeting of the U.C.W. will be held on June 3. It will be a pot luck supper at 6:00 p.m. in the Christian Education Building. The ladies of the Maple Lake congregation have been invited to attend as are all ladies wishing to share in the fellowship.

Doris Redner is a patient in the Minden Hospital at this time. Our best wishes for a return of good health.

Mr. and Mrs. David Moore of Sunderland visited with relatives over the weekend.

Congratulations to Newly Weds Chris Davis and Valerie Bryant whose wedding took place on Saturday evening at St. Peter's Church Maple Lake, with a dance following at Medley's in Carnarvon.

The community extends its deepest sympathies to the families of Don Campbell, Brant Stamp and Irving McKelvey. They will be greatly missed.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Community leader mourned

ONE YEAR AGO, on May 29, 1991, this community lost one of our most valued residents with the death of Malcolm Robertson Herlihey. He was affectionately known as just "Bob" by hundreds of friends and relatives throughout the Highlands, and his vital presence among us is keenly missed.

Bob was uniquely a citizen of the entire County, and was a familiar figure in all of our villages because of his outstanding career as an educator.

He became teacher at a very young age, and brought to the teaching profession a natural talent for understanding and motivating students, and a rare zeal for the improvement of conditions for both pupils and teachers in all the schools of our area.

Born at Kinmount, where his father, Francis David Herlihey, had a hotel and livery service, Bob was a descendant of two pioneering families of this area. The Herliheys were immigrants from Ireland who had moved north from the Peterborough settlement. Jean Herlihey, Bob's mother had taught in local schools in the early 1900s, and was one of the Henry Robertson family, also pioneers at Bob Lake in the Minden area. When Bob was a young boy he moved with his parents and brothers Harold and Harry to Tory Hill. He attended school there, and in Wilberforce and Haliburton, and became very familiar with the eastern townships through the family business there. Bob eventually became the owner of Camp Keewaydin, a resort near Highland Grove, which has been a favourite vacation spot for four generations of the Herlihey family now.

After graduating from North Bay Teachers' College, Bob followed his vocation with outstanding success for a remarkable period of 42 years in Haliburton County.

In 1939 he married Elizabeth Byers of Douglas, Ontario who was also a teacher. With their two children, Heather and Robert, they made their home in Minden. Specializing in Industrial Arts, Bob spent a number of years as itinerant shop teacher in the schools of the Minden area. This led to his appointment in 1953 to the position of Shop Director, and later of Vice Principal of the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

As a socially concerned citizen of this County, Bob Herlihey has few equals. The long roster of his community involvements includes: President and Treasurer of Red Cross; Campaign manager for the Heart Fund; member of the Masonic Lodge and the Eastern Star; coordinating Chairman of the Minden Cultural Centre; Clerk of Session and a Steward for Minden United Church; active member of both the Men Teacher's Federation and the O.S.S.T.F.; and a volunteer driver for Home Support. He was also a charter member of the Minden Rotary Club.

'Bob Herlihey was uniquely a citizen of the entire county'

However, it is not his many commendable achievements that we remember best about Bob; it is the easy natural warmth of his marvelous personality that most endeared him to his family and friends. To quote some of their comments, "He was a delightful man." "His remarkable life was distinguished by a personal dignity, urbane civility, ready wit, affectionate nature and devotion to his wife, family and community." "Duty, Service, Love, Loyalty, Care, Concern, and a reverence for Truth — these qualities defined the Bob Herlihey we will never forget." "And his stories! Bob was the prince of all raconteurs."

It is consistent with his character to note that Bob Herlihey's nominal retirement from the staff of Haliburton Highlands Secondary School by no means ended his association with the school and its students. He carried on for many years afterward in a volunteer capacity as a Trustee appointed by the School Board for the administration of the perpetual scholarships and memorial funds which are awarded to deserving students of H.H.S.S. annually. This was a task to which he devoted many hours and for which he was well suited by reason of his long and varied experience and dedication to the cause of better education for our youth. It is fitting that a memorial scholarship in the name of Malcolm Robertson Herlihey has now been established.

The memory of such a man, such a friend, as Bob Herlihey was to so many, can never grow dim. He was very special.

Dogs take fundraising by the leash

SENIOR LEAGUE WINNIFRED BARNUM

May 24, 1992 was the day of the Hyland Crest Canine Walk-a-thon. Dogs and owners were on hand at the Curling Club parking lot on time to register and begin the walk from the curling club, down Minden's main street, over the bridge and along the path to Home, where refreshments were served. There were about 40 walkers and a few more dogs. The dogs had beautiful shining coats and were well behaved. They walked around as much as to say: "there, I've done my share," and a good share it was. $6,700 was raised for Hyland Crest Tub Fund, made possible by the efforts of John and Rhonda Francis and Wally and Joan Bunn, in having the idea in the first place. Terry had Bullet in the walk. He and Norma and I went out for tea. Then May, Roy Cameron and Jackie Yateman took me out for supper.

The Sunday evening Chapel Service was taken by Rev. John Burgess and Alice Jones who played the organ. Thank you John and Alice.

At 1:00 Mary Guillemin

read to us. We appreciate this very much.

Monday afternoon the Hyland Crest Auxiliary met in the auditorium for their monthly meeting. There was a good attendance and a very lively meeting planning future events.

Monday evening Pat Bradburn came to show the movies. Pat brought her mother with her, Delilah Fielder.

A memory quiz was held in the Trillium Lounge in the afternoon.

Wednesday Doris took us for a bus ride. She took us down Deep Bay Road to Hwy. 35 at Moore's Falls, then back to Minden where we stopped at Mr. "D"'s Donut Shop. We had coffee and doughnuts. The residents appeared to enjoy this outing very much.

We surely know things are happening around here these days. It will all be worth it when our "tub room" is finished.

May 28, was tea party and birthdays of the month day, put on by the ladies of the Eastern Star in Haliburton. The ladies, Neva Hobden, Ena Marion, Jean Casey and Edith Johnston, provided a beautiful lunch and a birthday cake to honour six residents who had birthdays in May. These were Alice Rivers, Myrtle O'Halloran, Bea Brittain, Jean Taylor, Lorne Fry and Marshall Harrison. The tea was begun with blessings given by Jean Casey.

Thursday evening we had bingo. It was conducted by Kathy Thomas. It was new to her and she was alone but she did a good job.

Friday, Happy Hour was held. The entertainers were Lloyd Madill, Neil Howe, Carman Peters and Al Blanchard, who gave the Residents and friends a stirring afternoon of music and song. The usual volunteers were on hand to supply everyone's needs. We thank them very much for playing for us.

We are sorry to report that Anne Collison had a fall and is in St. Joseph's Hospital. We hope you will soon be home again.

Red Cross nurse cared about her many patients

WILBERFORCE
FLO ELLIOTT

We were sorry to hear that Dorie Kenny, a Red Cross nurse who was stationed in Wilberforce in the 1950s, died on May 27 in Thornhill, Ont. Mrs. Kenny was an excellent nurse and while she was at the Red Cross Outpost, she worked hard to help all those in her care. She was very well thought of and seemed to fit right into the community. Winnie Schofield kept in touch with her all these years and when Mrs. Schofield told her about the restoration of the Outpost, she sent a donation to help out. Mrs. Kenny was very active in Amnesty International in her later years. The funeral was on Monday June 2, in Toronto. I'm sure she will be missed by all who knew her.

In spite of the wet weather, the I.G.A. parking lot was a busy place on Sunday May 31. The barbecued hot dogs and the drinks were a big hit with the walkers and spectators alike. Bob Parks, the manager of the I.G.A. gave out gifts including hats and calculators to encourage the walkers as they circled the building again and again to the cheers of their pledges. The spirit and participation was great and a good sum of money was raised for the Heritage Guild and the Senior's Club. Thanks to all and also to the I.G.A. for this great community effort.

Yolanda Favret would like to thank the Firemen and the First Response for coming to her aid so often and so quickly. Their kindness and consideration are very much appreciated.

There will be a Thrift Sale of linens and drapes at St. Margaret's Anglican Church on Wed. June 17 from 6:30 to 7:30. This will be a really good place to get some bargains.

Please remember the Neighbourhood Party at the Red Cross Outpost on Sunday June 14 from 1 until 4 o'clock.

Come and help paint the outside of the building, bring your own brush. Bring a favourite flower and start a community flower garden. Meet friends and neighbours and have a great time. Refreshments will be provided by Agnew's Store. This is part of the celebration for Canada 125, and also to help preserve our heritage.

TALENTED YOUNGSTERS: Three of the finalists in the Wilberforce Legion's poster, poem and essay contest went on to win honours at the Zone F5 competition. Pictured above with Poppy Chairman

When Canadians work together we can take on the world and win.

To succeed in today's world, Canadians must be able to compete because our jobs directly depend on it. Preparing ourselves through training will help us to compete and secure the prosperity we want for ourselves and our children.

We have to invest in ourselves and be a country that says... yes we can.

COREL SYSTEMS CORP., OTTAWA

This Ontario company has captured 50% of the world market with CorelDraw, a software graphics program for IBM and compatibles. It exports 90% of its products to Europe and the U.S. and attributes Free Trade to the fact that it can operate so successfully from Canada, using Canadian talent and initiative.

Yes we can. We've got the proof.

Canadians are succeeding every day. Many individual and business successes exist... with real benefits for individuals, the communities they live in and for Canadian industry.

Hundreds of Canadian companies are achieving remarkable international success. They're creating jobs, developing new skills and opportunities for thousands of Canadians and creating markets around the world for Canadian products.

COMMUNITY TALKS

The Prosperity Initiative's Steering Group is developing a consensus-based plan of action to be presented to Canadians in September. Canadians told us that they wanted to participate in developing this plan of action. We listened...

Through a series of "Community Talks", thousands of people in 186 communities across Canada have contributed their ideas. They talked about how to address the challenges and opportunities facing us all in the areas of competitiveness and learning. They talked about how to maintain our standard of living and secure our economic future. They concluded that all of us have to play a part... and the government is listening.

Yes we can. We've got the ability to build on our successes.

We have a history of working in co-operation with others for world-class achievements in peacekeeping, medicine and space exploration. Now, with business, labour, governments, academic and social groups working together, we can achieve prosperity through international competitiveness. But there is one more critical factor: Canada's ultimate potential depends on the commitment of individual Canadians to being the best.

FREEWILL SAUNDERS, BRITISH COLUMBIA
"I had to make a decision to change careers. I chose to go into computer programming and part of my course was on-the-job training at BC Tel where I now work as a programmer analyst. Training really opened up a promising future for me in a fascinating industry!"

Yes we can. We've got the people.

It's time to focus our energies on our most important economic challenge yet... and prepare ourselves for a more prosperous future.

Yes, we can!

Families gather for wedding

WEST GUILFORD ELEANOR COOPER

Valerie Bryant and Chris Davis were married on May 30, at Maple Lake United Church. Valerie is the daughter of Roger and Doris Bryant of the Barry Line, and Chris is the son of Murray and Shirley Davis of Blairhampton. Isabelle Gibbs officiated at the organ for the beautiful ceremony which included several close family members. Rhonda Griffin, Valerie's sister, and Chris' sisters, Carolyn Bell and Marilyn Skelding, shared the bridesmaids' honours, and Rob Davis, Chris' brother, Dwight Bryant, Valerie's brother, with Gerry Bull as best man stood by the groom. Brandon Skelding, son of Bill and Marilyn, and flower-girl Kristen Cook daughter of Allan and Heidi completed the wedding party. The wedding dance to the North Country band was held at Carnarvon Bowling hall. Congratulations to Valerie and Chris with best wishes for a long and happy marriage.

annual Mother and Daughter banquet this year. Mrs. Nordvedt is a special friend of Kim Brown's from her home in Maryland, and owns a collection of 800 dolls. Her talk was of a delightful "Christian Walk with Dolls." Forty dolls, antique or new provided the display of interest and beauty that made it appealing. A wonderful meal, singing and lots of people — about 80 assured the success of the evening. For future reference, any woman or girl is welcome to attend even though your mother or daughter may not be with you. It sounds as if it will be a growing event. Congratulations to Judi and Andy Paul on the birth of their son, Andrew on May 9, 1992. Norma Crewson wishes to thank the West Guilford Centre committee for the use of the Centre for the contact (Seniors) Bridge Games. Fifty in number, they appreciate the facility as well as the competition they enjoy in games. To complete the minimal information in last week's column: Ian Stanley Wright Cooper, having received his honours B.A. in History from Queen's University in 1991, now adds the degree of Bachelor of Education to his honours as he graduated on May 29 from the faculty of education at Queen's in Kingston. Good wishes from the community to Ian. New Library Hours are: Tues.: 1:30 - 5:30; Wed.: 1:30 - 5:30; Thurs.: 10 a.m. - 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. - 9 p.m.; Fri.: 2:00 - 5:00; Sat.: 10 a.m. - 1 p.m. Closed on Mondays. Phone number is 457-1791. Looking ahead to summer swimming, Haliburton Rotary beach will hold classes in July. West Guilford's Pine Lake will have the lessons in August. More information will follow closer to the dates. Leslie and David Chumbley celebrated their anniversary in Oshawa last weekend with their friends Brant and Mary Ann Dulsura.
